Report Highlights:

In June of 2007, the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) countries approved a “Manual of Procedures of Controlling Imported Foods through the Ports of the Gulf Cooperation Council.” The United States and several other countries suggested changes to the Manual that would better align the requirements with international guidelines. Implementation of the Manual has subsequently been delayed as GCC officials reviewed the comments from exporting countries. Officials are expected to meet again during the latter part of 2009 at which point there may be greater clarity concerning a possible implementation date.
